About Legal Aid Society

Faculty of Law, Marwadi University is moving closer to establishing our very first “Legal Aid Society” (LAS), Legal aid is basically a diverse term that refers to a variety of activities aimed at advancing society through the creative use of the legal system. The legal profession, as it is currently practised and organised, is more concerned with improving the quality of legal services than with ensuring that legal services are distributed fairly and evenly. That is where the concept of Legal Aid comes into play: it aims to make law relevant to the masses who are left out and live below the line of visibility of law in action.

Vision

Lawyers, according to the University, should not remain in ivory towers, disconnected from social realities and needs. Instead, they must comprehend societal needs and tailor their education and skills to the benefit of those in need.

As a result, our students are prepared to act as social justice and social engineering agents. Students learn a variety of skills that they would not have learned otherwise through the curriculum. The students have the added benefit of being recognised as "lawyers" in their own community even before they graduate from law school.

Objectives of Legal Aid Society

- To raise community awareness of welfare legislation and programs, as well as to improve community access to programs run by the Legal Services Authority and other government agencies.
- To make every citizen approachable to his Rights and Duties.
- Understanding people's legal needs and problems, and addressing them by providing appropriate legal advice and taking all necessary steps.
